

Hello Michelle and Lance

Despite the few minor hick ups, travelling with our Earthcruiser has been a daily pleasure. The more we see how other people travel, it affirms that we have made the right choice.

There is not a single day where people don't comment on the vehicle, except when we are in campsite where we are alone, because few would ever get there.

One day we were tracked down by an enthusiast, who ultimately could be a future customer.

He saw us in the distance and followed reports of sightings on Bruny Island to where he suspected us, so he could have a chat about the vehicle.

He then sat for two hours in his car waiting for us to reappear from a bushwalk, just to give up in the end.

He left a message on the windscreen to call him back, so we obliged and met this wonderful character who wants one.

Or the moments when people take photos of the truck or wave us down with the odd Overlander or RV magazine in which they read about Earthcruiser and never expected to see one in the flesh.

One can not afford to be a recluse when travelling in an Earthcruiser.

Your best advertisement for your product is Earthcruisers on the road with happy customers inside.

Best regards

Uwe & Meg.
